

Client specific adjustments for SAP® Business One.

Designing your own input masks.

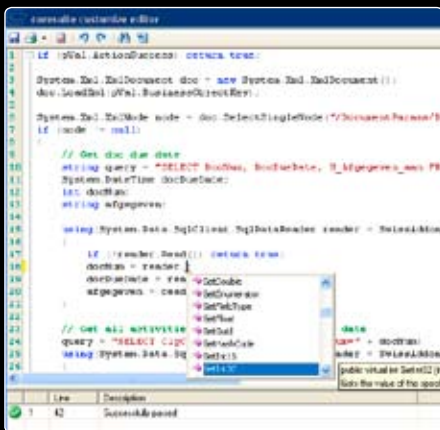

To allow you to establish your masks individually, each text field can be displaced or even hidden, if it is not needed. Changing the tab sequence, adding your own separators and additional information fields makes it possible to design forms that fully meet the client's expectations.

To each user his personal extensions.

All coresuite customize functions can be individually activated or deactivated for each user through administration rights.

Program your own functions.

You can program your own functions very easily with the coresuite editor.

Connecting to other coresuite modules.

Diversity of possibilities makes it possible to create combinations with other coresuite modules. Initiating printing jobs with coresuite designer, using coresuite time to dispatch service calls marked „for invoicing“ or importing/exporting company data with coresuite connector are but a few examples.

The functions button.

The functions button is an important element of coresuite customize. An endless number of functions can be added to it, such as creating emails directly from SAP® Business One, sending SMS, updating currency from a webservice or starting external programmes.

Import/export.

It is possible to import and export individual rules with a few simple mouse clicks. Applying previously created functions from an existing solution to a new system is absolutely no problem. For example, the ones that can be imported are made available on the coresystems ag website.

Advantages.

The major problem with standard solutions is their rigidity and inflexibility. This is precisely where coresuite customize enters the scene. Thanks to the possibility of adapting SAP® processes to internal company processes simply by creating rules, without expensive additional programming, SAP® Business One can quickly be adjusted to the client's needs. This improves software handling, as the module is already integrated in SAP® Business One, and automatically leads to a higher degree of client satisfaction.
